Jordan is an associate with Anderson Hunter. Jordan's practice emphasis is on municipal, business, employment, and tribal law. In addition to providing ongoing legal counsel to clients, Jordan frequently presents legal trainings on topics such as employment law updates, open government, and anti-harassment. Jordan also sits as an appellate judge for several local tribes.

Prior to joining Anderson Hunter, Jordan worked as a Tribal Attorney for the Swinomish Indian Tribal Community and as a Prosecuting Attorney for several municipalities in Snohomish County.

Jordan serves as a board member of the Downtown Everett Association and is currently chair of its Marketing and Events Committee. In addition to being passionate about her community in Everett, Jordan enjoys gardening, sewing, traveling to Europe, and reading the classics.
